Brooklyn yeshiva teacher accused of molesting teen boys

He reportedly molested at least four teenagers Tip-off came from a call that came to the NYPD rape hotline Incidents ranged from Brooklyn motel rooms to a Williamsburg synagogue

On the heels of convicted child molester Nechemya Weberman's sentencing last week to 103 years in prison, the Brooklyn Hasidic community is facing the allegations of another child sex abuse in their midst.

Yoel Malik, 33, was arrested last night and charged with several counts of sex abuse and endangering the welfare of a child, based on reports that he molested at least four teenage boys.

Malik and the four victims are all members of the Satmar sect and part of the Hasidic community in Brooklyn. Malik was a teacher at the Yeshiva Ohr-Hameir, which is reportedly closed for financial reasons. All of the victims were students at the school during the 2011-12 school year.

Nechemya Weberman, an unlicensed therapist jailed for molesting a young girl sent to him for counseling, was also a member of the Brooklyn Satmar Hasidic community.

The NYPD rape hotline received an anonymous call on Sunday reporting an alleged victim of sexual assault, and naming Malik as the assailant. According to the caller, Malik took the victim to a motel at 400 Washington Ave. in Brooklyn for seven hours.

Video footage from the location shows Malik and the victim entering the motel, and the room, as well as leaving the hotel seven hours later.

Police say the victim agreed to discuss the allegations after a pre-planned two-week trip to Israel, but refused to say more over the phone because his parents were present. He is 16 years old.

The caller reported three other victims. Two are 16, the other is 15.

Malik engaged in various acts with the boys, from ranging from fondling to oral and anal sex, according to the NYPD. The incidents took place in motels and Malik's car, and a few reportedly occurred in Monticello, N.Y. The fourth victim reported one experience in a synagogue in Williamsburg.

Malik accused the victims of making sexual advances toward him, which he told police he refused.

The Brooklyn DA's office

Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes' office said Malik, the suspect, has not yet been arraigned. His lawyer, Stacey Richman, was reportedly in court and could not be reached for questions.

Sex abuse hotline for Orthodox community

In 2009, the Brooklyn DA's office set up a hotline, referred to as Kol Tzedek, specifically for sex abuse victims in the Orthodox Jewish community. DA spokesman Sandy Silverstein said they've "gotten a number of calls" but did not provide exact figures. Silverstein said that since it was established in 2009, the hotline has resulted in more than 100 cases (not necessarily convictions).

The call reporting the allegations against Malik did not go through Kol Tzedek, according to Silverstein.

Thugs with nunchucks attack for jacket

The assailants approached the victim on the mezzanine of the station and told him they liked his jacket and wanted it.

They beat and kicked him and when he resisted, one of the suspects began to beat him with a pair of nunchucks.

The victim was able to escape through the turnstile and was treated at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital and released with lacerations to his head.

The suspects are between 17 and 19 years old, Hispanic and each about 5-foot-7 or -8 and 150 pounds. One wore a gray jacket and yellow and burgundy baseball cap; the second wore a gray jacket and green baseball cap; the third wore a black t-shirt and black-and-gray checkered scarf.

City pushes for safer delivery drivers

DELIVERY.COM

▶ The city is co-sponsoring a safety initiative, called SaferHood, to distribute bells, bike lights and reflective vests to delivery drivers.

Many New Yorkers have ducked out of the way as a delivery biker careened down a street, rushing to make a delivery on time.

In an effort to make street users safer, the Department of Transportation announced Jan. 31, that it will give 1,500 cyclists safety gear in partnership with Delivery.com.

The safety initiative, called SaferHood, will distribute bells, bike lights and reflective vests.

The equipment will be given out at forums around the city, where business owners and cyclists can learn about bike safety laws.

DOT instructors visit businesses — 3,530 since July, according to the city — to tell them they must provide helmets, bikes, vests and ID numbers to delivery bikers.

Beginning in April, DOT employees will enforce rules requiring delivery cyclists to complete an online safety course covering the laws.

57 Percentage of businesses that comply with the city's regulations

"New Yorkers want their deliveries in a New York minute, but the businesses that employ bike riders need to be as up to speed on safety as they are on making fast deliveries," DOT Commissioner Janette Sadik-Khan said.

EMT convicted of sex crimes

An FDNY paramedic has been convicted of sexually assaulting five people, Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes said.

According to prosecutors, Angus Pascall, 36, an FDNY EMT, was convicted Jan. 30 for the sexual assaults.

Hynes recounted a string of harrowing assaults. According to prosecutors, the first crime was in 2001 when he asked to leave a package for the neighbor of a 22-year-old woman. He forced his way into the apartment, threatened her and raped her.

Eight years later, in 2009, he forced a 19-year-old to perform oral sex inside her apartment building's elevator, armed with a machete. He also attacked another girl, 14, but fled when she struggled and screamed. In 2010, he trapped an 11-year-old girl inside an elevator and sexually assaulted her.

5 Pascall is convicted in five assaults.

The fifth case was also in 2010, when he forced a woman, 20, into his car at gunpoint, prosecutors said, raping her in the backseat.

This victim memorized his license-plate number, reporting it to the police.

Pascall will be sentenced Feb. 13. He faces up to life in prison.

PICKING THE EASY TARGET

Advice

TOM FOREMAN
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

letters@metro.us

CNN POLITICS

As a teenager hunting doves, I learned to choose my targets quickly. Two birds sweep in over the trees — which one do you aim for? The answer for the hunter is always "the one that is easier to hit."

So I watched with interest as D.C. lawmakers tackled the issue of gun control in a jam-packed, emotional hearing just a few days ago. Their success or failure in turning the pathos into meaningful legislation will depend on which target they choose.

The first target, a measureable reduction in gun violence, is hard to get into the crosshairs. In 2011, the FBI says "firearms were used in 67.8 percent of the nation's murders, 41.3 percent of the robberies and 21.2 percent of the aggravated assaults." In raw numbers, that means one of us pulled out a gun and pointed it at someone else at least 1,120,139 times.

Each incident brought its own circumstances. Some shooters were run-of-the-mill criminals. Some were deranged. Some were furious. Some may have been great fans of violent video games, and others were not. Some were bullied in school, and others were bullies.

Quoted

"Some were bullied in school, and others were bullies."

Although the weapon of choice was often a handgun, the variety was vast: small and large calibers; single shots, revolvers and semi-autos; guns with extended magazines and guns without — each obtained in its own way.

Clearly many politicians — both for gun rights and gun control — would genuinely like to see less gun violence and to find the magic legislation that will produce fewer shots in the night, fewer heartbroken families and fewer horrifying headlines. But crafting such a law against that complicated background will be undeniably difficult.

That's why they so often aim for the second target, the one that makes it look like they are trying to do something so they'll get credit from voters. You hold hearings, you express your outrage and you introduce measures that don't have a chance of passing or that will produce no meaningful results, just so you can say you did.

That's an easy target to hit, and, most often, a meaningless one.

With his city's NFL team favored to win the Super Bowl and celebrations primed, San Francisco Mayor Edwin Lee is urging bartenders to voluntarily curb alcohol service and calling for revelers to drink in moderation on game day.

People should know their limits as they cheer the San Francisco 49ers when they face the Baltimore Ravens in New Orleans on Feb. 3, Lee told reporters.

"They ought to just be cognizant that an overindulgence in a celebratory way could be very hurtful to communities and to themselves," said Lee, 60, following a speech. BLOOMBERG

Grand Central Terminal

Iconic New York landmark celebrates a century Station has bounced back from despair of the 1970s Each day draws hundreds of tourists, commuters and shoppers

MILES DIXON/METRO

Equal parts transit hub and tourist destination, Grand Central Terminal celebrates its 100th birthday on Friday, Feb. 1.

The iconic station has experienced its share of difficulties over the years, most notably when it fell into disrepair and was nearly wrecked to make way for a skyscraper.

But with the help of renovations, it has reemerged as a beloved architectural gem, visited by roughly 750,000 people each day.

"The design is impeccable," said MTA spokeswoman Marjorie Anders. "The feeling that you get when you walk into the main concourse with its soaring arched ceiling and its magnificent monumental windows and the stars coming down, it has a visceral effect on people."

Most visitors to the terminal ride the subway or Metro-North trains, check out the 35 eating establishments or 68 shops, take a walking tour or self-guided audio tour or just pass through to avoid bad weather outside.

Others are content simply to gawk up at the ceiling in wonder, much the 1903: Construction begins on Grand Central Terminal. Three churches, an orphan asylum, 120 houses and a number of other structures are demolished to clear space.

1913: The station, which cost over $2 billion in today's dollars, opens to the public at midnight on Feb. 1. The first train leaves 20 minutes later.

In honor of Grand Central's centennial, music and dance performances will take place virtually all day Feb. 1 in the station's main concourse. A celebrity-filled opening ceremony and the unveiling of a new U.S. Postal Service stamp are also on the agenda, and retailers will be selling certain items at 1913 prices. Later on in the year, Grand Central's Vanderbilt Hall and its New York Transit Museum Gallery Annex will host various art exhibitions, along with a poetry reading. same way people did when Grand Central Terminal first opened in 1913.

"When he built the original one [in 1871], it was far out of town," said Anthony W. Robins, co-author of "Grand Central Terminal: 100 Years of a New York Landmark." "The city was concentrated much further south."

In 1900, the depot was renamed Grand Central Station following a large expansion effort. Two years later, however, a train collision in a smoke-filled tunnel killed 15 and injured 38, prompting demands for electric trains to replace steam-powered ones.

MILES DIXON/METRO

That's exactly what the station's owners decided to do. During the construction of Grand Central Terminal from 1903 to 1913, they electrified and buried the tracks, which used to look somewhat like Sunnyside Yards in Queens.

"It really created East Midtown," Robins said in reference to the new buildings that popped up on site.

People originally flocked there in droves. In addition to the train tracks, a movie theater, an art school, CBS television studios and tennis courts could all be found there at various points.

"It's come through all of these hard times. In a way it's mirrored the progress of the city over the last 40 years." ROBINS

Nonetheless, it eventually began to deteriorate as focus shifted from train to car and air travel.

"It was dangerous, it was filthy and there was a huge homeless population," Robins said.

In the 1970s, the city — with the help of celebrities like Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis — narrowly averted an attempt to replace the structure with a 55-story skyscraper.

Renovations have since restored its former splendor.

"It's come through all of these hard times," Robins said. "In a way it's mirrored the progress of the city over the last 40 years."

SUMMIT ENTERTAINMENT

Nicholas Hoult has tackled trying to get the girl when you're an awkward tween (in "About a Boy"), a ruthless high-schooler (in TV's "Skins") and a blue-haired mutant (in "X-Men: First Class"). But those challenges pale in comparison to "Warm Bodies," in which he tries to win over a girl (Teresa Palmer) despite the fact that he's a flesh-eating zombie.

How tough is it doing a role that's basically one facial expression for most of the film?
Surprisingly easy, actually. [Laughs] Narrows down your options and what you have to do at work, and not a lot of dialogue to learn, which is beautiful. But yeah, I read the script and I was like, "This could be a cool film," and then I was like, "Oh, it's kind of tricky, though, isn't it?" You don't get to say a lot, and you've got to move and act like a zombie, but you've also got to have this audience care for you and want you to succeed and have this girl care for you enough and fall for you, and there's a lot to do. With Teresa, it was just basically watching her do scenes the whole time, her just doing monologue after monologue and then I'd go, "Yeah, keep you safe. Hungry. Eat. Whatever." [Laughs]
Have you heard every zombie joke in the world at this point?
You know what, I've made a few terrible ones myself. I've said, like, "Oh, he's a character I really liked and wanted to bring to life." Idiot. I said of the scenes with me and Rob Corddry I found it really difficult not to corpse [which is British slang for laughing during a scene]. So I've made a few terrible zombie jokes, but I haven't actually been on the receiving end of that many so far.
OK, zombies versus vampires. Where do you stand?
Who would win in a fight? Or the transition from vampire to zombie time?
As far as pop culture.
You know what? I'm trying to think. Aside from "Twilight," what other vampire films have their been particularly recently? That's the prominent one. To be honest with you, I would probably have to go with the zombie thing just because I really like "Shaun of the Dead" and "Zombieland" and those sort of things, and "28 Days Later" and stuff, so I think I'd go for the zombie — and not just because I played one in this film.
After this film, do you think you'd have trouble getting excited about doing a more traditional romantic comedy?
I don't know. I mean, I'm a sucker for a rom-com. You know, you feel good and you get all gooey. But I wouldn't want to do one of those ones that's very run-of-the-mill, out of the box, off you go, pay $10 to go and see it and then sit there and nothing new happens. So it's tricky. I'd like to be able to do all types of films. Action, drama, romance, all of them.
Yeah, I've got a fairy tale family adventure movie, "Jack the Giant Slayer." There's mild peril. There's giants that want to eat humans, so you know, I wouldn't take a really young kid to it.

PACINO, UNCHAINED

The legendary actor swears that he's mellowed out in recent years While promoting his latest film, 'Stand Up Guys,' Pacino explains why he'll never retire

"Stand Up Guys" finds Al Pacino playing an aging criminal released from prison after 28 years and taking stock of his life while trying to prove he's still got some life in him. So it seems like a perfect time to check in on Pacino himself and see how he's holding up. Here's what we learned from our chat with the 72-year-old actor.

He has no plans for retirement: "I don't even know what that means, really. It's all about retiring to what? What is retirement about? Sometimes I wonder, why am I doing this? I think it is understanding what you're capable of doing. If a role interests me, excites me or challenges me, then I don't see any reason why I wouldn't try it. If the roles become far and fewer between, then that's OK too because then I'll find other things to do."

The actor feels far from accomplished as a director, though: "I feel that I'm doing the wrong thing. Sometimes when I do a movie and I'm sitting seeing a preview of the movie I'm thinking — because the film is some place else, usually in the editing room, miles away — I often think I hope that somebody grabs hold of that film right now and recuts it and makes it good. [Laughs] I've made about four or five of my own films. Only one has seen the light of day, but I do have other films I've made with my own money. Spielberg once said to me: 'Never put your own money in a movie,' and he was right. But at the same time, it was fun to do and I'm glad I did it."

GETTY IMAGES

He admits he wasn't always easy to direct: "There's no doubt that I've gotten easier to work with. There's no doubt. They tell me that. [Laughs] I think that when I was younger I was much more difficult. If I've learned anything from directing, I learned what directors go through with actors.

A certain amount of empathy is gotten out of that by doing it yourself."

The joys of poker

Throughout his career on the stage and screen, Al Pacino has had one hobby that keeps him happy: holding a regular poker game. "What I like more about poker more than anything else is it's a game. It's for very low stakes, and there's a friendliness in it," Pacino says. "And I enjoy the guys that I get, the group, because a lot of them are old friends. I like that gathering. There's something comforting about it. Sometimes I just lose track of the game. People confer, and sometimes things come out and people talk. And I enjoy that. ... It's very zen. It's like meditation."

METRO MBA

WEEKEND

ISTOCKPHOTO

Which MBA study format is right for you?

With more ways of studying for an MBA now available than ever before, choosing the right MBA program can be complicated. So what are the options?

Full-time MBA

The full-time MBA program is the most renowned of all MBA degrees and, according to research by TopMBA.com, is the preferred option for more than 55% of MBA candidates.

Students can expect to rub shoulders with a wide range of people from diverse backgrounds. As such, the full-time MBA program gives students unrivalled access to a peer-to-peer education with talented businesspeople from all over the world.

One- or two-year MBA degrees?

U.S. business schools tend to offer two-year MBA programs, but in Europe and elsewhere the preferred model is the one-year program.

The two-year option generally has an assisted internship during the intermediate summer, and it allows greater time for personal development and networking.

The one-year option is extremely intense and will take up almost all of the student's time. However, the course will be less of a financial investment and will mean less time out of the workplace.

Part-time MBA

Though the full-time MBA degree program is the preferred method of study for most people considering a business education, a part-time MBA program offers distinct advantages.

The part-time option minimizes the disruption to a candidate's personal and professional life, allowing them to stay in work and to pay their way through earning an MBA degree.

Many of the best business schools now have very viable part-time MBA courses that take place after work, at weekends or during holiday periods.

The downside is that juggling various commitments while staying on top of the syllabus can be extremely demanding.

Distance-learning MBA

With the technological advances of the Internet over the past two decades, both online and distance-learning programs have become increasingly popular.

In the past, the varying quality of programs meant employers generally favored graduates from full- or part-time campus-based programs. However, greater accreditation and the increased popularity of these courses mean this perception is rapidly changing.

While the majority of study is via the Internet, distance learning MBA students are required to attend some on-campus sessions, exams and networking events.

Online MBA

Online MBA courses are designed for convenient access from anywhere in the world with an Internet connection.

Many of these schools argue that MBA students are taught very similar, if not the same, curricula — so theoretically they graduate with the same skills.

If you are considering an online MBA course but don't know which course to choose, it can be useful to look at business schools that have already been accredited after operating regular MBA courses on campus for many years.

Executive MBAs

Designed for professionals with six or more years of work experience, an executive MBA (EMBA) is an MBA catered for those who wish to continue working while pursuing an MBA.

The EMBA program is delivered in a part-time format over a period of around 12 to 24 months, allowing participants to study while they work. Course format varies between program, from weekend or evening sessions to more modular approaches.

MBA guide

MBA admissions checklist

Admissions tests, interviews, essays, résumés and English language tests can all play a vital role for business school admission departments when selecting which candidates to accept and who they should reject from their MBA programs

The MBA admissions process can be long and complicated.

MBA admission tests

The often-feared Graduate Management Admission Test is the most common of all admission tests for MBA programs. As of June 2012, the GMAT now consists of four sections: Quantitative, Verbal, an Analytical Writing Assessment and Integrated Reasoning. GMAT scores are required in applications to many of the top MBA programs.

However, there are alternatives. While the Graduate Record Examination is designed as a standardized test for many different graduate programs, more and more business schools are accepting it each year.

ISTOCK

Many business schools run their own MBA admission tests. These usually follow similar styles and test structures to the GMAT; however, they are conducted by the schools themselves, allowing them to ensure tests adequately evaluate candidate performance according to their own programs.

References

Professional references or letters of recommendation are a requirement at many schools. While the emphasis each MBA admissions department places on these references can vary substantially, in cases where two similar applicants have applied but only one place is available, they could well be the difference between success and rejection.

Admissions essays

MBA admissions essays are a requirement for nearly all of the top business schools. Instead of traditional essays, candidates are usually required to write about their suitability for the MBA program to which they are applying.

When applying to multiple schools, it can be the case that many of the essay questions are quite similar. Successful applicants reject the urge to submit the same essays, instead writing passages that specifically refer to the school in question.

TOPMBA.COM

Interviews

Usually reserved for MBA applicants who have progressed through the admissions components, interviews can be the final stage in the process.

- MBA admission interviews can be conducted by various different representatives: the admissions departments themselves, previous alumni or even businesspeople with a link to the school.
- While some interviews may take place in an informal setting, candidates should always remember that they are being judged on their suitability for an MBA program and should act accordingly.
- Further requirements may be asked of candidates depending on the school and the background of the candidate. For instance, English language test scores will usually be required from applicants who come from non-English speaking countries.

Advice

First steps for choosing the right business school

Business schools are not all the same. Carefully research your choice of school to ensure that it matches your requirements.

ISTOCK

1 Determine why you want an MBA: The very first step is to analyze your personal motivations for pursuing an MBA. Are you a career switcher or a career progresser? Do you want to carry on working while you take your MBA or do want to focus on your studies and consider your options? Is a jump in salary what matters most or do you seek international experience? Is your primary goal to broaden your education and your horizons or to develop specialist skills for career enhancement?

An honest self-assessment will save you a great deal of time and energy and help you make a more focused selection of schools.

2 Identify your career goals: The second thing to do when considering business school is to try to narrow down the types of career you might like to pursue, balanced by a realistic self-assessment of your current abilities and skills base. Examine your motives carefully. Determining where you want to work after your studies should be a major part of this process.

3 Figure out your budget and study mode: The full-time MBA is still by far the most popular program in terms of candidate numbers. Part-time and executive MBA programs are growing in popularity, but are still in the minority. The standard period for a full-time MBA program in the USA is two years. Tuition at schools such as Wharton, Harvard and Stanford are approximately $50,000 to $60,000 per annum.

4 Know the criteria for your choice of school: International reputation is one of the most important selection criteria, as is career placement and return on investment. Other criteria include: scholarship availability, specializations, rankings, teaching style, profile of students/alumni, quality of faculty research, course length and location.

'Cat' is housebroken

Much of the hype for Tennessee William's "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," now at Richard Rodgers Theatre, focuses on its top-name cast. Some can't wait to see Tony winner Debra Monk stalk the stage as Big Mama. Others are eager to watch bombshell Scarlett Johansson lead as Maggie (the Cat).

With a run time of nearly three hours, the show's two intermissions seem like welcome reprieves from the laborious cat-and-mouse games that take place as potential heirs vie for the vast plantation owned by dying patriarch Big Daddy (Ciaran Hinds). That's because it's not a play that can rest on its plot. Most of the big secrets — to be held up and turned in the light like fine yet flawed gems — come out in the first act.

Afterward, it's just a matter of seeing how the characters bait one another with these revelations and adjust to each other's feints. To that end, the impetus should undoubtedly be placed on the actors. Unknowns with something to prove might have added a sense of rawness and purity that this production desperately craves; these cast members are more like show diamonds already indelibly cut and comfortable in their grooves.

Aside from the lush set (literally; its bedroom/bar combo more than underscores the dual demons of Brick, played unevenly by Benjamin Walker), director Rob Ashford also focuses on distinctive offstage sound effects, such as shouts, laughter and fireworks, that punctuate the play's most riveting tension. But the too-perfect timing make it hard to believe that a party is actually going on beyond the sumptuous suite where the action takes place. Ashford's energies may have been best invested in the character's beats in order to further complicate what is, at its heart, not as much feline but a very human play.

Today, Nicholas Hoult has joined the tweeting masses, Dwayne Johnson is serious about exercise, Mark Duplass expects more from his subconscious and Sarah Silverman is feeling very accomplished.

THE WORD

Dan Schachner: A doggone good ref

Dan Schachner has not been killed by cuteness. Far from it: The actor was all business refereeing "Puppy Bowl IX," the annual Animal Planet game that pits one adorable team of puppies against another. He talked with us about making sure the pups play a clean game, the newest addition of hedgehog cheerleaders and about looking out for No. 1 (and 2).

What precautions do you have in place to make sure the Puppy Bowl doesn't become a "Poopy Bowl"?
Even with all the precautions, there really is no way to prevent a "Poopy Bowl." These pups only have one thing on their mind — playing a great game and scoring as many touchdowns as possible. If an on-field accident should occur (and they do), we need to act fast to clean up the "foul" before it affects the action on the field. Puppies will be puppies, even when they're playing football in a mini stadium.

ANIMAL PLANET

▶ Dan Schachner will never pay more attention to where he steps than during the action on the field.

ANIMAL PLANET

Have there been any rumors of off-field puppy doping?
There is a rigorous medical exam and physical for all the pups. We can't have them disgrace "Puppy Bowl's" good name after all. They are aware of the strict consequences if any tests should come back positive. The kittens, on the other hand, are addicted to cat nip, but we go easy on them since the are always nervous before the halftime show. I'm joking. Cat nip is a serious problem for kitties in America.
Baby hedgehogs will be the cheerleaders. Can they get the crowd going?
These are tough hedgehogs with a lot of spirit! Personally, I think they out-pep last year's Piggy Pep Squad but don't quote me on that. You'll see the hedgehogs in tutus with miniature footballs rooting for their favorite pups throughout the game on Sunday.

Who will be MVP?

I feel like Chestnut is a shoo-in for MVP (Most Valuable Puppy). Do you have dibs on anyone?
Chestnut definitely plays a great game. That little pup doesn't stop for anything! Personally, I'm a big fan of Oscar, a 15-week-old Dachshund who's favorite dish is weiner schnitzel. I would keep an eye on him if I were you.

Talking points

Sheen isn't worried about Lohan's troubles

At least Charlie Sheen isn't worried about Lindsay Lohan's legal troubles. "She's terrific," he tells Jay Leno in an interview. "I mean she's going through a lot of stuff, but she's smart and supertalented and will come out on top eventually, you know." As for the $100,000 Sheen loaned the troubled actress — money she reportedly put toward her massive tax bill — Sheen says, "I didn't know it was for taxes. If I had known that, I'd have given her half."

Get ready for some more 'Magic Mike'

Steven Soderbergh might be retiring from directing, but that doesn't mean a sequel to last year's "Magic Mike" isn't on the way — at least according to Matthew McConaughey, who played the leader of a team of male strippers in the film. "I know it's something that's legitimately brewing," McConaughey tells MTV News. "In the right way [I would come back. It would be so much fun, but I would only be able to revisit [my character] Dallas if I really go, 'OK, that's what he would be doing.' I'd have to keep him the same tone."

▶ "Magic Mike"

Lawrence goes to the grocery story (egad!)

Oscar-nominee Jennifer Lawrence recently told Metro that her "Silver Linings Playbook" co-star Bradley Cooper had taught her that she can't go to the grocery store anymore now that she's famous. "It's fine, I can get friends to get my groceries," she said last month. But apparently Lawrence thought the height of awards season was a good time to try again, as she was spotted this week at a Los Angeles supermarket, buying groceries incognito under a large purple hat and a massive scarf, according to photo agency X-17.

Mayer takes a chill pill, man

John Mayer is definitely mellowing when it comes to dealing with paparazzi. "The way that the media plays a part in everyone's life has changed over the last several years," he tells Rollingstone.com. "I mean, I used to be incredibly put off by somebody taking a picture, thinking as if in some way it was it was invading my brain. But all it is is you can see where I was last weekend. That's all. And I think time has shown that nothing will be stolen from you. It's just a photograph of you and your dumb scarf that you put on because it wouldn't fit in your suitcase. Cool."

A little celeb spotting for your weekend

1 Sometimes we forget Diane Kruger is German. Here she is promoting "Der Naechste, Bitte!" in Berlin yesterday.

3 Michael Bolton performed "When A Man Loves a Woman" and other hits at the Jamaica Jazz and Blues Festival in Trelawny, Jamaica on Wednesday. Still got it, Bolton.

4 Gemma Arterton happily signed autographs at the Australian Premiere of "Hansel & Gretel: Witch Hunters," in Sydney on Tuesday. Anyone who is cranky when signing autographs for fans is officially on our s— list.

Horoscope

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Because you've been in the thoughts of someone dear to you and who resides at a considerable distance, there's an excellent possibility that you'll get a call from him or her.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. It's imperative that you keep quiet about what you've been told in strict confidence. If you promised that you wouldn't breathe a word to anyone, don't break your vow.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. The enthusiasm and optimism you show will have a contagious effect on your associates, which will help you in return. You need others' feedback as much as they need your input.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. One of the reasons you're likely to do better than most of your peers is that you'll be cognizant of the small but significant details that others totally ignore. Good for you.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. What makes life more comfortable and enjoyable during this cycle is associating with people whose political and religious views parallel yours. They'll make you feel more at ease.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. With your natural ability to ferret out information that others are reluctant to reveal, you'll need to be especially mindful to keep things to yourself.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Because partnerships are favored, you could find yourself involved in several such arrangements for different purposes. Each one should work out well.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Both your intuition and logic will be especially keen at this point. It's a good thing, too, because each will be instrumental in helping you resolve issues.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Do not get discouraged if your achievements do not necessarily measure up to your expectations. The important thing is that you're moving forward, even if it's only one step at a time.

Letters

Dem should douse his house fire first

RE: "OSCAR-WORTHY PERFORMANCE BY GOP" (METRO, JAN. 31) It's one thing to publish letters that attempt to make a valid argument against the GOP and the policies it supports. It's completely pointless and a waste of space to publish letters like Robert La Rosa's about giving an Oscar to the GOP. Was his point that he feels the GOP is "pretending" to work in the best interests of the people of the U.S. and your editors agree with him so his letter was published? He's entitled to his opinion and I have mine about people like Mr. La Rosa who blindly follow the Democrats and their policies without stopping to think about the long-term ramifications of them. There's plenty of criticism that can made to people on both sides of the aisle, but people like Mr. La Rosa never criticize any Democrats. When President Obama was a senator in 2006, he made a speech explaining why he was voting against raising the debt ceiling and in that speech he said: "Washington is shifting the burden of bad choices today onto the backs of our children and grandchildren" and he called it "irresponsible" and "unpatriotic." Now he wants Congress to raise it without hesitation and he said it's "absurd" to even entertain the idea of not raising it. That's pure hypocrisy.

Militia: Not just you, your buddies and your shotguns

RE: "SECOND AMENDMENT PROTECTS RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS" (METRO, JAN. 31) First of all, the framers of our Constitution gave us all a weapon against thugs and tyranny: the government established under the Constitution.

I have yet to see a constitution, anywhere in the world, which enshrines a right of armed revolt against the very government it establishes. We only have to look to the suppression of the Whisky rebellion in 1794 to see the fallacy of the contention that the Second Amendment was set up to resist tyranny. Second, the founding fathers did indeed view well-regulated, well-disciplined and well-organized militias when they wrote the Second Amendment. They know that a group of armed men does not constitute a "militia" and they remembered that poorly-trained militias cost us battles during the Revolution.

Jersey Joe Flacco

Ravens QB started his career in southern New Jersey Trained for NFL at TEST Academy Has risen to biggest stage in football

GETTY IMAGES

Joe Flacco's path to the NFL — and Super Bowl XLVII — was as unassuming as the quarterback himself.

When Flacco committed to Pittsburgh in late December of his senior year at Audubon High School, southeast of Camden, N.J., he wasn't a big-name recruit.

After transferring to Delaware, he led the Blue Hens to the playoffs twice and the championship game in 2007. Flacco began preparing for the NFL Draft with former Giants quarterback Scott Brunner at TEST Football Academy in New Jersey. Flacco's successful postseason hasn't been a surprise to Brunner.

"Joe was an extremely talented quarterback when he came to us out of college," Brunner said. "Like most guys preparing for the NFL, they rarely need a major overhaul, but rather modifications to their technique."

Flacco has thrown for 853 yards this postseason, with eight touchdowns and no interceptions. More than anything, it is his calm, unflappable style that is translating to wins.

"There were many who thought he needed to show a more fiery personality," Brunner said. "I knew that if he tried to be something he wasn't, his teammates would see right through that act. ... I think the leadership torch of the Ravens is now being passed to Joe."

City prepares for 2014 Super Bowl

The counter on the website for the NY/NJ 2014 Super Bowl Host Committee updated Thursday to read 367 days until Super Bowl XLVIII comes to New York City.

CEO of the 2014 NY/NJ Super Bowl Host Committee Alfred F. Kelly Jr. said things are moving forward as he observes this year's game.

"There's no real available game plan. It's learning on the fly and taking what you can from the other cities that have done it. [We are] really taking advantage of the experience of the NFL that have done their 47th Super Bowl," Kelly said. METRO/KD

Get prop-ing

Sure, you can bet on the Super Bowl itself (the Niners are at -4), but the real fun is in prop bets.

- How long will the national anthem be?
  Odds: Over 2:10 (Even), Under (-140)
  Our take: Alicia Keys is known for stretching out chords, but the recent average is 1:40, so we go under.
- Will Jay-Z join Beyonce during halftime show?
  Odds: Yes (-105), No (-135)
  Our take: As much as we would love to see the king and queen of hip-hop perform together, it's not likely to happen.

More Bey, less Jay, please.
